ADD STORY

3-Feb-2016

The DI SIPIO winery in Ripa Teatina, Abruzzo, Italy, near the Adriatic sea, is inserted in a large wine estate and it's integrated with the pre-existing Seventeenth Century's villa and the natural landscape.

We choose a structure completely underground respect to the floor of the ancient house, to take advantage of the stable temperatures, so the roof became the villa's garden.

Materials and forms are linked to the tradition of the territory: arches made of bricks embrace the two levels underground, sand stones, steel, Cor-ten steel, and finally large glazed surfaces allowed the landscape to enter inside.

The Tasting Room is dominated by the texture of the Cor-Ten ceiling slabs, the effects of light, shade and color evoke the image of plowed fields. As for interiors also the outdoor furniture (most made
